PREFACE

This clan documents the ancestors of Barclay Harding Warburton I to IV. It traces the line back to the marriage of Henry Warburton and Martha Sanders at Oxford, England in 1742. The origins of Henry and Martha have yet to be uncovered, as have the records of their deaths which might give a clue to their dates of birth, if their ages at death are recorded.

Information on the Barclay Harding Warburton families in the USA, primarily Philadelphia, is mainly taken from Wikipedia entries, supported by some online records. There is available information on branches of the family that remained in England, but this has yet to be added to the tree.

The Barclay Harding Warburton name came to my attention through the story that links the socialite Mary Brown Warburton to the naming of the Bloody Mary cocktail.

Nothing has been found for Henry of Martha prior to their marriage, but as they were described as lodgers on their marriage they probably came from elsewhere. No death records have yet been found. Their age at death would give a pointer to their dates of birth.

The Philadelphia Inquirer. 17 July 1877 Obituary

John Warburton.

On the morning of the 14th instant Mr. John Warburton, a respected citizen of Philadelphia, died at his residence, No. 251 South Seventeenth street, in the sixty-sixth year of his age. Mr. Warburton was born in England in the year 1810. He came to Philadelphia in 1837, and entered into the silk and millinery goods business on South Second street, at a time when that thoroughfare was the fashionable street for retail sales.

The leading retail dry goods stores were then upon that street. When the tide of business moved westward, Mr. Warburton removed to No. 1002 Chestnut street, where he remained for upward of twelve years. About ten years ago he retired with a handsome competence, and has since that time been leading a quiet life. His health has been gradually failing, but his mind remained clear to the last.

He leaves a wife and daughter and an only son, Mr. Charles E. Warburton, the publisher of the Evening Telegraph. He was a man of strict integrity and careful business habits, and to this much of his success can be attributed. His charity was unostentatious, but he always had a kind ear and liberal hand for the suffering or sorrowing. His funeral takes place from his late residence, No. 264 South Seventeenth street, this afternoon at three o'clock."

John's gravestone states he was born in Oxford, England.

On 6 Mar 1832 when John was 21, he married Barbara Jane Abell in Cheltenham, Gloucestershire. Both John and Barbara were 'of this parish'. Barbara Jane was born in Leamington Spa, Warwickshire, on 17 Jun 1811. Barbara Jane died in Delaware Co., PA, on 25 Jul 1888. She was buried in Philadelphia, St James the Less Episcopal Churchyard, PA.

The Philadelphia Inquirer. 26 July 1888:

Mrs. Barbara J. Warburton, widow of the late John Warburton, died yesterday morning, aged 77 years, while sojourning with her son, Mr. Charles E. Warburton, proprietor of the Evening Telegraph, at his summer residence, Rosemont, in Delaware County. Mrs. Warburton possessed in a high degree those admirable qualities of mind and heart that endeared her to all who knew her."

Charles was baptised the same day as his sister Emily. His father was a draper from Leamington on his baptism record.

Charles was the publisher of the Philadelphia Evening Telegraph, having started at the paper in 1864.

Although various on-line sources say he was born in Philadelphia, his 1880 census entry says he was born in England. In fact his family arrived in New York in 1841, though Charles's passport applications suggest he was unclear on the details.

Charles E. made 2 passport applications. The first was issued on May 20th 1880. He stated he was born on 2nd March 1836 in Leamington, and had resided in Philadelphia since he was 3 years of age. He was naturalised in the Court of Common Pleas on May 19th 1880. He was to travel abroad with his daughter Mary B Warburton, aged 15, and visit Great Britain, Ireland, France, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Switzerland, Italy and Austria. He was described as aged 44, 5 ft 7 1/2 inches, with blue eyes, a round face, grey hair, large nose, and a small mouth.

Seventh Generation

8. Barclay Harding Warburton III (*Barclay Harding*⁶, *Barclay Harding*⁵, *Charles Edward*⁴, *John*³, *George*², *Henry*¹). Barclay Harding was born in Philadelphia, PA, on 5 Feb 1922. Barclay Harding died in Newport, RI, on 1 May 1983.

Barclay Harding Warburton III or Buzz, Buzzy, or Buzzie to his close friends, was the founder of the American Sail Training Association.

He became a step-son of William Kissam Vanderbilt II, and a step-nephew of Harold Stirling Vanderbilt, when his mother Rosamund remarried.

Barclay graduated from Harvard University in 1948, and served in the Massachusetts House of Representatives as a representative from the 2nd Essex district. He was a member of the Agriculture committee and the Marine Fisheries Committee.

He and his wife Margrett purchased the 140-acre Mosley place in Ipswich, MA., and renamed it Saracen Farm. They turned it in to an organic dairy farm milking 50 head of Golden Guernseys. When Buzz and Margie divorced in 1959 the farm was sold to the Catholic Church.

Buzz purchased the 72 ft brigantine Black Pearl and set off around the world. Halfway to Panama better senses got hold of him and he returned to the Bahamas, where he settled in at Lyford Cay and built several houses by Clifton Dock.

In 1964, he participated in the OPSAIL 64 and decided sail training was for him. From then on the Black Pearl was no longer the yacht Black Pearl, but rather the sail training ship Black Pearl.

When the Bahamas gained independence Buzz went up to Newport, RI and started the Black Pearl restaurant, remarking at the time, "well we need someplace decent to eat". The Black Pearl was never a financial success for Buzz, but it got him a huge amount of recognition and he had every folk singer and blue grass picker in the place every weekend. Nonetheless, the restaurant is one of Newport's most famous and longest established restaurants.

By 1972, he readied the boat for a transatlantic passage, starting with a shakedown cruise to the Virgin Islands. In late May the Black Pearl left for England with 14 crew and after 23 days arrived at the Lizard. Travelling through Europe that summer with the tall ships he earned much praise and recognition. The British Sail Training Association (STA) asked him to start an American STA and become its chairman, which he did.

The 1976 Tall Ships was a great success and really put Newport on the map. Buzz sold the Black Pearl Restaurant to Tom Cullen but kept a royalty for the use of the name.

However, Buzz is most known for founding the American Sail Training Association which was inspired by his many travels under the power of wind to Europe and elsewhere.

Buzz died on May 1, 1983. His ashes were scattered at sea of Newport RI. He was survived by his second wife; five children from his first marriage; a stepdaughter; and five grandchildren.

In 1947 when Barclay Harding was 24, he married Margrett Mckean. Buzz and Margie divorced in 1959.

Margrett was from Pride's Crossing, MA.

Barclay Harding Warburton IV was known as Tim. He attended Le Rosey School, St Andrews School, Hyde School, and Boston University. He served with the US Merchant Marine during the Vietnam War, making 2 Pacific crossings in 1968, and then served in the United States Navy (1968–1970) as navigator.

He was the founder of the Connecticut River Valley Boatworks in 1972, which became the Vermont Oak Company in 1976 specialising in high-quality oak, walnut, and cherry furniture.

In 1984 he joined with Brook Phillips Lacour to pioneer the villa vacation model as an alternative to staying in hotels beginning in St. Barthelemy as an owner of West Indies Management Company (WIMCO Villas and Hotels), headquartered in Newport, with the purpose of renting vacation homes in prime locations while not occupied by their owners. This proved successful, and the company quickly moved on to St Martin, Anguilla, Nevis, Barbados, Mustique, and then into the South of France, Italy and Greece, as well as Nantucket, Hawaii, and Mexico.

Tim's love of sailing took him across the Atlantic twice, once as sailing master in 1972, and returning in 1973 as skipper aboard the 72 ft brigantine Black Pearl. He sailed with his father regularly, and joined him in Opsail '64, New York, Tall Ships '72, Cowes, Malmo and Travemunde, and then again in '76 from Newport–Bermuda–New York–Boston. He raced as navigator aboard the 65 ft yawl "Nirvana", participating in such events as the 1986 Statue of Liberty celebrations, 1994 New York Yacht Club Sesquicentennial and the 2001 America's Cup Jubilee in Cowes, winning the Antigua Classic Race Week in 2005.

Tim also served as a director of the Newport Music Festival, and the American Sail Training Association (Tall Ships).
