PREFACE

In 1792 Charles Mongan, the future Bishop of Cloyne, changed his name to Warburton, the name of his maternal cousins. His descendants form a second clan of Irish Warburtons. There is inconclusive evidence that his Warburton cousins, and maybe his mother, were descended from one of the sons of Richard of Dublin, ancestor of the Garryhinch Warburtons.

First Generation

1. Dominic O'Mungan. Dominic was born in 1715. Dominic died in Tyrone, Ireland, abt 1774.

The story of Dominic O'Mungan his life and descendants to the next 2 generations, especially including Bishop Mongan Warburton, is told by Norman Mongan in his book 'The Menapia Quest.' published Herodotus Press 1995, p165-169.

He was the famed blind "poor road-way" bard harpist of Tyrone County.

Dominic married Anne Warburton (possibly).

The identification of an Alicia Warburton as cousin-german to Terence Charles Mongon, and sponsor of his change of name in 1792, means that either Dominic married a Warburton, or his sister-in-law did.

A hand drawn tree in the genealogical extracts of Sir William Betham references Ralph Bigland (1712-84) an antiquarian and Norroy King at Arms, as both the source of the tree, and the subsequent disclaimer to its truth. It shows that Anne, the mother of Rev. Charles Mongan, was herself a Warburton before her marriage.

However the London Gazette entry announcing the change of name refers to it only as the name of Charles's maternal cousins, and not his mother's maiden name. It is possible that it was Anne's unidentified sister who married a Warburton and produced Charles's Warburton cousins. However as it was Alicia who was sponsoring the change of name this could be sufficient explanation for the omission.

The pedigree also suggests that Charles's cousins were descended from John, son of Richard of Dublin, being the children of his son William. This would make William a prime candidate for the 'cousin William of London' in the will of John's nephew Richard. Betham's tree would seem to lack at least one generation given the time lapse involved, and this could explain why he says his pedigree is inaccurate.

However 'cousin' could cover a cousin once removed, and Richard did have a cousin Richard who had a son William who was living in London around the time of Richard's will.

Therefore, given that William is not mentioned in the wills of his father, mother or brother, he probably didn't exist.

It is possible that William of London was a parent or grandparent of the William and Alicia mentioned in the London Gazette, but no actual proof has been uncovered.

The connection to an established Anglo-Irish protestant family could also explain why the sons of a blind harpist could afford a sound education, and why two of them subsequently renounced the Catholic faith.

They had the following children:

- i. Mark Mongan. Mark was born abt 1750. Mark died abt 1775.

According the 'Menapia Quest' by Norman Mongan page 166, Mark was educated to be a priest and achieved excellent results at the College in Louvain. But when he returned from his study "he fell into a decay and died at his father's house in Strabane".

- ii. John Mongan. John was born in Monaghan, County Monaghan Ireland, abt 1753. John died in Monaghan, County Monaghan Ireland, on 31 Oct 1803.

According the 'Menapia Quest' by Norman Mongan page 166, John was the second son of Dominic O'Mungan. He practised in and about Monaghan as a medical doctor, and had a good reputation. He recanted his Catholic faith and was killed in a carriage accident coming home from the races at Middleton in 1803.

Family belief in Australia is that he was married and had several children, including Sophie Caroline Mongan, John Charles Mongan, and John Mongan. Upon his death it is believed that three of the children were brought up in the household of his brother the eventual Bishop of Cloyne.

These included Frances Susannah who was married, by Bishop Warburton, to The Rev. Thomas Carpenter Carr on January 12th 1812 at St Peter's, Dublin. Three of their children emigrated to Australia, including Charles Warburton Carr. He was born in 1824 in Dublin and emigrated in 1854. He was a very active man in various roles. He became a Police Magistrate, and the town of Warburton in Victoria was named after him. He married Geraldine Mary Kathleen Curr in Kew, Melbourne, Australia in 1864.

A branch of Mongans in Yackandandah, Victoria believe they may be John's descendants through his son John Mongan who died on board the ship Hindoo en route to Australia. His wife Eleanor or Ellen McElvey and his sons eventually settled at Yackandandah Victoria. However it is uncertain that the John who died at sea is John's son as it is determined through family tradition, names and coincidence of dates.

There are known male descendants to 2008. DNA was taken from a living descendant, Mark Mongan aged 88 in 2008. It is hoped that his DNA will match that of a male descendant of the Bishop Mongan Warburton, or another male descendant John, but no candidate has yet been found to test.

John Young now deceased, researched the line from Sophia Caroline Mongan Fairtlough into the Young and Kirchoffer lines and his work was republished by Tim Sandberg. Tim has summarised John Young's remarks below.

"This Mongan used the given name John. His brother John Charles has been recorded as John Mongan, John Charles Mongan and Charles Mongan. It is probable that he used the given name Charles to distinguish himself from his brother with the given name John".

The same family folklore existed in the Australian Mongan family, as in the Canadian descended Mongan/Young/Kirchhoffer families. The story of the Bishop matched. In fact, the Australian Mongan family understood that Dr. John Mungan and Miss Alcock had six children and some of them were brought up by Bishop Dr. Charles Mongan Warburton. It can be assumed that the clerical Alcock family also reared some of the children. The name Mark has been carried on through the generations in the family in Australia. This fact is significant.

Additional note by Elaine Hopper. In the year 2008 Mark Angelo Mongan, the assumed great grandson of the medical doctor, remains alive at 88 years, living near Yackandandah Victoria Australia. The given name Mark from the earlier grand uncle, Mark, the priest, has been carried down through the family for centuries including into the children of Mark Angelo Mongan of Yackandandah's 2 sisters Maura Mackay and Jane Patricia Murphy.

John married Unknown Alcock. Unknown was born bef 1780.

John is supposed to have married a Miss Alcock as per notes about the Fairtlough family in 'Clerical and Parochial Records of Cork, Cloyne, and Ross' by William Maziere Brady (1864), which refer to "Sophia Caroline dau of John Mongan MD by a dau of Colonel Alcock".

2 iii. Terence Charles Mongan Warburton (~1754-1826)

Second Generation

2. Terence Charles Mongan Warburton (*Dominic O'Mungan*¹). Terence Charles Mongan was born abt 1754. Terence Charles Mongan died in Cloyne, Cork, Ireland, on 9 Aug 1826. He was buried in Cloyne Cathedral, Cork, Ireland, on 12 Aug 1826.

A good reference to the life of Terence, his forebears and some of his children, is the book 'Menapia Quest', by Norman Mongan (The Herodotus Press, 1995). He was known by the first name Charles and anglicised his surname from O'Mungan to Mongan and then to Warburton as detailed here. He also renounced his Catholic faith and joined the established church, which enabled his career to blossom.

His early education to be a priest was undertaken in France. His first career was as an army chaplain and details are available on the website of the 62nd regiment to which he was for some time attached: http://www.62ndregiment.org/Charles_Mongan.htm.

The site describes how he served in North America during the American War of Independence. During this time, in 1779 he married Frances Marston, a very well connected New York woman. She was probably his second wife who bore his children and outlived him. Details of his first wife are unknown.

There are also army details in 'From Revolution, Religion, and National Identity: Imperial Anglicanism in British North America 1745-1795' by Peter M. Doll (Fairleigh Dickinson University Press, 2000). Page 243 describes how, after the war, in 1785 "Robert Lowth, now Bishop of London sent the Reverend Charles Mongan, an army chaplain who had been a favourite of Sir Guy Carleton in New York, on a one-year study of the church in Canada".

The 'London Gazette' Issue 13196 published on the 27 April 1790 stated: Dublin-Castle, April 16, 1790. Letters Patent have been passed under the Great Seal of this Kingdom, granting the Deanry of His Majesty's Cathedral Church of St. Patrick, in the Diocese of Ardagh, to the Reverend Charles Morgan, A. M. An ERRATUM in the next issue corrected his name to Mongan.

The London Gazette', issue 13241 published on the 28 September 1790, chronicles Charles Mongan's retirement from the chaplaincy of the 60th (or the Royal American) Regiment of Foot: William Leslie, Clerk, to be Chaplain, by Purchase, vice Charles Mongan, who retires.

In 1792, Mongan changed his name to Warburton as announced in the 'London Gazette' of 22nd May 1792, page 334. The entry reads : The King has been pleased to grant to the Reverend Charles Morgan, Master of Arts, Rector of Loughgilly, in the County of Armagh, and Dean of St Patrick's Cathedral, Ardagh, in the Kingdom of Ireland and his issue, his Royal Licence and Authority to assume and take the Surname of Warburton only, in pursuance of the desire of his maternal cousin-german, Miss Alicia Warburton, spinster, sister of the late William Warburton, of the City of London Esq, deceased; and also to order that His Majesty's concession and Declaration be entered in His College of Arms. The following issue of the London Gazette noted an ERRATUM to the effect that the name was Mongan.

It is not yet known who the Warburton relations, William and the spinster Alicia were, but the term cousin-german, which means a full cousin' would suggest that Charles' mother's surname was Warburton, since Alicia the spinster was a Warburton. The William Warburton is not believed to be the famous Bishop William Warburton.

After changing his name Charles rose in the church, eventually becoming the Bishop of Cloyne, and extremely wealthy and well-connected. The Bishop's correspondence is preserved in 'Additional MS no 35731/35746 and 40227/40356' at the British Library, London.

'Clerical and Parochial Records of Cork, Cloyne, and Ross' by William Maziere Brady (1864), details his children, though it names a Maria and not the Bishop's beloved daughter Selina who died just before him, to his great grief, in 1826 and who is buried near and commemorated with him in Cloyne Cathedral. Nor does it mention a daughter, Charlotte. However the wills of his sons Augustus and Garnett both mention their sister Charlotte. Selina had died by the time the wills were made. A Maria is not mentioned in the wills. There was a Maria Warburton, daughter of the Bishop's son, also a cleric, Charles Warburton, Archdeacon of Tuam, and this may be where the confusion arose.

The Bishop died at Cloyne on 9 August, 1826, and was buried in that Cathedral on 12th August. On his tombstone is this inscription: To the Memory of the RIGHT REV. CHARLES WARBURTON, D.D., Lord Bishop of Cloyne, Deceased 9th August, A.D. 1826, Aged 72 years. This memorial of affectionate Regret is erected by his disconsolate Widow, Frances Warburton, and Children. He was consecrated Bishop of Limerick 13th July, 1806, and translated to this See 20th September, 1820. To a dignified Deportment in the strict Discharge of his Holy Office, he united most engaging Suavity of Manners and unbounded Benevolence.

On 18 Feb 1779 when Terence Charles Mongan was 25, he married Frances Marston in

New York, USA. Frances was born abt 1758.

Frances's parents were Nathaniel Marston (born 1740) and Anna van Courtland (1736-1790).

Nathaniel Marston was the son of a very wealthy New York merchant also named Nathaniel, who he predeceased. In his will of 1774, the senior Nathaniel left his granddaughter, Frances Marston, a house in Hanover Square New York (now Pearl Street) and her sister the adjoining property. He owned a large number of slaves from Jamaica. Nathaniel Marston predeceased his father of the same name.

They had the following children:

- i. Garnett Warburton. Garnett died aft 1848.
